

Toads' Day Out

The toad family decided to have an outing in Disneyland. There were the mama and papa toads, the brother and sister toads, their aunts and uncles, their cousins, and the cousins' aunts and uncles and cousins. There were a lot of toads! They finished with Fronteirland and wanted to try Adventureland, which was on another level, up a steep hill. They tried to go there by stagecoach, but the whole family couldn't fit in. They tried the monorail, but again, they were too many toads for a monorail car. Then they noticed a sign "Ride the giant buffalo up to Adventureland!" The buffalo was ready to go, and he was indeed huge. They all climbed on his back with plenty of room to spare, and it took them up to Adventureland. They could have saved the time wasted on the monorail and stagecoach if they had only remembered: a bison ride lifts all toads.
