

Savvy Shoppers

Those who have accumulated exceptionally good karma during their lives are granted a choice regarding their next reincarnation. They are brought into a giant warehouse with racks of possible lives they could live. They can walk down the aisles, take a life off the rack and examine it. They're not allowed to try on the lives, but they can look to see how it worked out the last time a soul entered it. There are a few lives that have never been entered, but savvy life shoppers generally ignore them, as they have no history to serve as a guide in making their choice. Too risky! These souls know that an unlived life is not worth examining.

